GW, listen to Daddy:

"Extending the war into Iraq would have incurred incalculable human and political costs. We would have been forced to occupy Baghdad and, in effect, rule Iraq. The coalition would instantly have collapsed, the Arabs deserting in anger and other allies pulling out as well. Exceeding the U.N.'s mandate would have destroyed the precedent of international response to aggression we hoped to establish. Had we gone the invasion route, the U.S. could still be an occupying power in a bitterly hostile land."

From "Why We Didn't Remove Saddam" by George Bush Sr. and Brent Scowcroft, Time, 1998

Women do two-thirds of the world's work, receive 10 percent of the world's income and own 1 percent of the means of production.

And you thought feminism wasn't needed anymore? Feminism: believing in and seeking the social, political and economic equality of the sexes. That's it. That's what we want. Don't you?

Poverty is a Weapon of Mass Destruction!

The number of Americans living below the poverty line has steadily climbed since 1977. The working poor are harder-pressed than two decades ago. The middle class puts in more hours than ever, and carries higher debt. The richest 1%, meanwhile, now control more wealth than ever.

But why are the poor getting poorer? Who are the poorest? You can find some answers at:
